PRODUCTION PARTNER

Jailbabe is supported by Griffin's Production Partner program.

THE UNIVERSITY OF SYDNEY

This production of Jailbabe was supported through a residency at Theatre and Performance Studies, the University of Sydney.

Jailbabe was developed and produced with the assistance of the Australian Writers' Guild David Williamson Prize.

Griffin gratefully acknowledges the generosity of the Neilson Foundation, whose transformational gift has created a permanent home for Australian stories on stage.

Griffin would not be where we are today without the vision and generosity of the Seaborn, Broughton & Walford (S,B&W) Foundation, to whom we owe the great privilege of being able to perform in the much-loved SBW Stables Theatre.

PLAYWRIGHT'S NOTE

The law applies to all regardless of background (but it doesn't). The state is supposed to step in early where there is inequality or abuse (but it doesn't).

While we all turn a blind eye to human rights abuses in prison systems, there is the awful irony that we all KNOW what happens—and indeed those passing sentences have been known to threaten those before the criminal justice system over what awaits them in prison.

Rape and torture are not part of a prison sentence—but they are what can be reasonably expected, and it goes predominantly without prosecution. We as a community never take umbrage that this is what occurs when our 'squeaky clean' justice system doles out prison time so that the 'rest of us' can live in peace.

Given that the system began as a means of protecting a man's (sic) property (which included that man's wife and children from rape or damage), the law has then evolved such that property theft/damage rather than anything else is the highest form of transgression (other than murder) and therefore receives the highest sentences.

When those who have no property or income infringe upon those who do, then prison it is. When they are in prison, they are paradoxically traded as property, reduced to raw meat, and bartered amongst other prisoners.

As a society, are our ideas around property wrong?

When those destroyed young men leave prison it is not without the scars and anger that lead to violent crimes (that they had previously not had any inclination towards). It is not without rampant homophobia against innocent individuals in the community who played no part in the heterosexual rape of jailbabies in prison. The self-hatred and their experiences of prison life is a source of shame and undermines their sense of self with such ferocity that they must now prove they are 'a man' (i.e. a 'heterosexual') to themselves and the world in the one way they know—by perpetuating more violence against the vulnerable.

This play was written with the support of the brilliant Griffin Theatre Company, the generous support of the David Williamson Award and dramaturgy by Declan Greene, with further input from Andrea James and Caleb Lewis. I hail and thank Griffin Theatre Company once again for its commitment to new Australian works. This first ever season of Jailbaby is directed by Andrea James, a Yorta Yorta/Gunaikurnai woman who it has been an honour to work alongside on Gadigal land. Andrea's talent, theatrical language and emotional insights around this work have been invaluable. A director who digs deep, perfectly blending her brilliant mind and heart in her artform, Andrea runs a rehearsal room with respect and humanity at all times.

I also thank the entire creative team and the brilliant cast on this premiere production: Lucia Mastrantone, Anthony Taufa and Anthony Yangoyan. I cannot express the appreciation for the wonderful people who have supported me to write this play: my family: Robert, Gabriel and Sasha; my close and loving friends; my agents: Zilla Turner at HLA Management, Julia Kreitman and Tanya Tillett at The Agency London; Claire Grady and Katie Pollock at Currency Press; Jane Sanders at the Shopfront Youth Legal Centre; and all the Griffin Theatre Company contributors and audiences.

Suzie Miller
Playwright

DIRECTOR'S NOTE

Working with Suzie Miller on Jailbaby has been like being in the slipstream of a jet airplane. Coming off the back of the London and Broadway successes of Prima Facie and with her background in human rights law and youth justice, Suzie brings her multiplicitous sensibility and legal expertise to the task.

Ground down by over a decade defending young people in a flawed and inhumane justice system, Suzie shines a light into the darkest corners of incarceration and rigid class systems that entrap us all.

Young vulnerable men—many of whom graduate from juvenile detention to adult prisons—are known as 'jailbabies'; and are subjected to violence and sexual abuse while incarcerated at an alarming rate. A study by David Heilpern in 1998 found that up to a quarter of prisoners experience sexual violence and rape in Australian jails with an overrepresentation of people from marginalized communities. With politicians all too eager to lock young offenders up and throw away the key, prison authorities and Australian society turn a blind eye to the 'extra punishment' that regularly occurs in our jails—often in the name of defending the property of the middle classes.

The high and impenetrable walls of adult prisons in Australia belie a world thick with fear and tension; where language, systems and codes of behavior are like nothing experienced on the 'outside'. Stripped of privileges and privacy there is a constant atmosphere of high alert and a stratification of prison society where the abuse of power and force is the most valued and terrifying commodity.

While our jailbaby transforms from an innocent bystander to hardened criminal, Suzie deftly holds a mirror up to another young man—the youngest member of the well-to-do family whose house is robbed. Equally troubled and criminally culpable, the unequal consequences for this young man are plain to see. In a colonial country with a foreign and imposed justice system, you can literally get away with murder if you're on the right side of society's ledger.

And while both of our 'babies' may seem like they are worlds apart, are we all just as trapped by class and commercialism as those who are sent to prison? Is it okay for us to continue to turn a blind eye to sexual violence and human rights abuses in our prisons in the name of keeping society safe and our property protected?

When our worlds collide, we may find that we're not really that different from each other.
